Meiyin Wang to Serve as Armory’s First Artist-In-Residence Curator

Under Construction Series, Showcasing Works in Progress by Artists-in-Residence
Launches with Performance by Acclaimed Drummer, Producer, and Composer Ulysses Owens Jr. on April 8, 2015

Updated May 2015

New York, NY – March 19, 2015 – Park Avenue Armory announced today that it has appointed Meiyin Wang as Curator of its expanding Artist-in-Residence program—an initiative that supports the development of new, collaborative, and explorative works by artists creating at the intersection of different disciplines. Wang, renowned for her on-going work as Co-Director of The Public Theater’s Under The Radar Festival and Director of the Devised Theater Initiative, has deep experience working with emerging and established artists. In this newly created position, Wang is responsible for the development of the Artist-in-Residence program in coordination with Armory President and Executive Producer, Rebecca Robertson, and oversees the Under Construction series, which showcases works developed during the residencies.

The Armory has awarded seven residencies for the 2015 season, and will launch its Under Construction series on April 8, 2015, with a performance by multi-Grammy award winning drummer Ulysses Owens Jr. Additional artists-in-residence this season include inventive theater company 600 Highwaymen; self-taught animated filmmaker and artist Brent Green; theater artists Taylor Mac and Machine Dazzle; New York City-based writer, director, and production designer Andrew Ondrejcak; vocalist, composer, and cultural worker Imani Uzuri. With seven artists in residence at the Armory simultaneously, the intention is to create an electric environment for collisions of diverse practice, experimentation, and dialogue.

“Expanding the Artist-in-Residence program and continuing to provide opportunities for artists across genres to develop and present new work in non-traditional settings remains at the heart of the Armory’s mission and program,” said Rebecca Robertson. “Last year, we were able to provide our artists-in-residence with expanded space in our historic second floor period rooms; this year we are thrilled to bring on a new curator to further support the program and the Under Construction performance series. Meiyin Wang has deep experience working with emerging artists from around the globe, and her passion for experimentation makes her the perfect fit for this position.”

“I look forward to working with the diverse array of talented artists that come to the Armory to embark upon unconventional projects and push their practice to unexpected places,” said Wang. “As one of the world’s most innovative cultural centers, the Armory’s commitment to living artists is remarkable. I am honored to be part of the next phase of the Artist-in-Residence program and thrilled to broaden my support of adventurous artists and expand on my continuing work at The Public. With the historical Regiment rooms as their studios, it is my hope that the artists will be fueled by the history, community and propulsive creative energy of this landmark building.”

Meiyin Wang is the Co-Director of The Public Theater’s Under The Radar Festival, where she has worked since 2006. Wang also serves as the Director of the Devised Theater Initiative at The Public Theater, which was launched in 2013 to enhance Under The Radar’s year-round programmatic structure by serving as an incubator for independently produced work. She was also the lead curator of Arts Emerson’s TNT Festival 2012 and the associate producer of RADAR L.A. 2011.

Wang has served on numerous adjudication panels including National Endowment for the Arts, New England Foundation for the Arts National Theater Project, New York Foundation for the Arts, Association of Performing Arts Presenters, The MAP Fund, Los Angeles Department of Cultural Affairs, and the Boska Komedia Festival (Krakow). She is a new appointee to the board of Theater Communications Group, and received TCG’s Young Leader of Color award in 2008 and the Josephine Abady Award from the League of Professional Theatre Women in 2014. Born and raised in Singapore, Wang served as resident playwright and director with Singapore Repertory Theatre before moving to New York. She holds a B.A. in Political Science and Theater Studies from Yale College and an M.F.A. in Directing from Columbia University.

ABOUT THE ARMORY’S ARTIST-IN-RESIDENCE PROGRAM

Park Avenue Armory launched its Artist-in-Residence program in 2010 with a mission of supporting artists across genres in the creation and development of new work. Residencies are by invitation only and selection for the 2015 season have been made by Meiying Wang, in conjunction with Rebecca Robertson and the Armory’s Education Director Cassidy Jones, based on the artist and the project.

The Armory provides each artist with a dedicated room for rehearsals, open studios, salons, donor cultivation, Board meetings, and—most importantly—for quiet, uninterrupted, work. The Armory also provides administrative and production support for the Under Construction public showings, providing artists a chance to showcase works in process through intimate performances, events, and discussions within the Armory’s diverse and historic spaces. After these performances, the Armory’s technical team creates a list of technical specifications used during the performance, making planning easier for the artist if he or she wishes to present the work elsewhere.

The Armory’s Board of Officers Room recently became home to the recital and Under Construction series in 2013, following the room’s revitalization by Herzog & de Meuron. This year, work has begun to renovate and restore the Veterans Room, which will transform it into a state-of-the-art cultural salon for spoken word, lectures, and other Under Construction events upon its completion in December 2015.

Residencies also include participation in the Armory’s arts education program with the artists committing to at least one education encounter per term; some choose to work closely with the Armory’s Youth Corps interns, others choose to participate in workshops when public school classes visit.

Previous Armory Artists-in-Residence have included dancer and choreographer Wally Cardona; the creative team behind the production AGING MAGICIAN, including Julian Crouch, Rinde Eckert, and Paola Prestini; visual artist and choreographer Jason Akira Somma; soprano Lauren Flanigan; writer Sasha Frere-Jones; Trusty Sidekick Theater Company; vocalist-songwriter Somi; multidisciplinary performer Okwui Okpokwasili; choreographer Faye Driscoll; artist Ralph Lemon; visual artist Alex Dolan; musician Meredith Monk; sound artist Marina Rosenfeld; string quartet ETHEL; playwright and director Young Jean Lee; and Shen Wei Dance Arts; among others.

About Park Avenue Armory

Part palace, part industrial shed, Park Avenue Armory fills a critical void in the cultural ecology of New York by enabling artists to create—and audiences to experience—unconventional work that cannot be mounted in traditional performance halls and museums. With its soaring 55,000-square-foot Wade Thompson Drill Hall—reminiscent of 19th-century European train stations—and array of exuberant period rooms, the Armory offers a new platform for creativity across all art forms.

Since its first production in September 2007—Aaron Young’s Greeting Card, a 9,216-square-foot “action” painting created by the burned-out tire marks of ten choreographed motorcycles—the Armory has organized a series of immersive performances, installations, and works of art that have drawn critical and popular attention. Among the highlights of its first seven years are: Bernd Alois Zimmermann’s harrowing Die Soldaten, in which the audience moved “through the music;” the unprecedented six-week residency of the Royal Shakespeare Company in their own theater rebuilt in the drill hall; a massive digital sound and video environment by Ryoji Ikeda; a sprawling gauzy, multisensory labyrinth created by Ernesto Neto; the event of a thread, a site-specific installation by Ann Hamilton; the final performances of the Merce Cunningham Dance Company across three separate stages; the New York Philharmonic performing Karlheinz Stockhausen’s sonic masterpiece Gruppen with three orchestras surrounding the audience; and WS by Paul McCarthy, a monumental installation of fantasy, excess, and dystopia; a sonic environment that blurred the boundaries between artist and audience created by the xx; and an immersive Macbeth set in a Scottish heath and henge by Rob Ashford and Kenneth Branagh.

Concurrent with the development of its artistic program, the Armory has undertaken an ongoing $200-million revitalization of its historic building, designed by architects Herzog & de Meuron.
